HAPPY HOLIDAYS

(Be prepared to wear a mask)

The weather we are having is both a blessing and a curse. It is great to be able to get out most days but the ground is bone dry. I can hardly push a probe in the ground. Digging a three sided hole... I try not to do it very often because I don't want to leave a mess. My motto is to leave no trace and that is becoming difficult. My wife bought me an early Christmas present, an Equinox 600. I'm excited to learn how to use it properly. I took it out on a test run the other day in a park that I have been to recently but doesn't get a lot of use. The first thing that happened was the headphones that came with it didn't work. After consulting with my dealer, we decided to use the speaker. What an experience. I've been using headphones for my entire hunting career. It did take some getting used to. I promptly ordered some wireless headphones. I charged them up today and will be out tomorrow to try them out (after I read the manual again). I have read it about three times and thought I had the operation down. Wrong! I did manage to get things working enough to find a few coins but after going home and reading the manual again, I got a few things mixed up. The manual had to be downloaded to my laptop so I can't just take it with me. Well, I suppose I could. It is better for me to keep reading the manual at home. I bought a Minelab Explorer when they first came out. The learning curve was about a year and then I never did learn its full potential. Of course, I don't think I read the manual as many times as I have now. I'm going to read certain chapters again tomorrow while I'm waiting for the temperature to warm up a bit. I think I can pair up the detector and the headphones from what I read today. I think I read somewhere about my smartphone getting involved. Hopefully my hearing aids that are on Bluetooth too still work when I'm done. Isn't technology fun? I hope everyone has a wonderful and safe Christmas and New Year. I'll probably be reading my Equinox manual.

Happy trails,

Got Your Checklist Filled Out?

I, being of sound mind and body, do hereby leave my worldly possessions to...

Many of us have filled out the above words with some variations. But what is your wife or children going to do with all the relics and treasures you have spent a lifetime accumulating? Will they put them in a yard sale at giveaway prices that would cause you to roll over in your grave? Would they put them into a local auction that charge 30% of the sell price and might not have the right people there to appreciate it? Would they trust one of your friends to dispose of the collection for you? Think about that breastplate, belt buckle, display case full of bullets or even your metal detector going for $5 at a yard sale. Scary, ain't it? Regrettably, this scenario is played out more and more. Most of the time your wife and children do not realize the value of your items or know the correct way of disposing of your collection. Sure, a few key items will be kept and handed down but the rest may be considered "junk" that you kept around for years. Giving written instructions and specific value guides will help them in their time of grief. Be sure to give realistic values to your relics, metal detectors, guns, knives, reference material, coins, antiques, arrowheads, jewelry, oddities and other such items. Some of these items may have more sentimental value than actual value, so keep it real. Update this list from time to time as pricing changes over the years. Hopefully, from the first time you make this list to your leaving day, you will add to and increase the pricing of many of your items. Another idea is to add some pictures of key pieces in your collection so they will know what you are talking about when you say "US Belt plate #3".

Speaking of pictures, don't forget to select some for a tribute picture slide show at the funeral home. This will show others your passion of detecting and give your detecting friends a smile. Your family may not think of this. You may want to have some of your items go to friends or others that have done some- thing for you in the past. An old digging tool may not realize much money but your digging buddy may smile when he sees it sitting on his shelf with a picture of the two of you. Procrastination is a bad habit. Take the time to lighten some of the load off your loved ones. If you do not want to do some of these steps at least be sure to leave your loved ones my name and number. Five bucks for a Civil War buckle sounds good to me.

One last thing: write some of your experiences down for your loved ones to read. Mention names in those funny or serious stories. This is to help them understand you, your love of the hobby, and your friendships. But a word of warning, not all stories need to be written down. I speak from experience. A couple of years ago I came mighty close to meeting my maker. I realized my wife and son would have been left with a great burden of trying to figure out what to do with my accumulation. I am still working on my list and I hope I get to keep adding to it.

Speaker for the December Meeting

Our speaker at the Dec. 10, 2021 club meeting will be Ray Sumner, who is a Colorado State University instructor, anthropology/archaeology doctoral candidate, and retired U.S. Army Lieutenant Colonel. Our Historical Artifact Recovery Team (HART) has worked extensively with Ray on the Julesburg Project in far northeastern Colorado. HART detected fields near Julesburg for 9 days in 2019 and 7 days in 2021. We collected hundreds of artifacts related to the historic Battle of Julesburg in January 1865, where Indians and soldiers fought following the infamous Sand Creek Massacre. Ray will give us a status report on the project. In addition, he will discuss a mission to northern France that took place in August to search the crash site of a B-17 bomber from WWII. Ray was the Project Manager of this mission which was conducted on behalf of the U.S. Defense POW/MIA Accounting Agency and CSU's Center for Environmental Management of Military Lands. Ray assembled a team of archaeologists and metal detectorists who worked together on this important mission. Ray is an engaging, enthusiastic and knowledgeable speaker. Please plan to attend this interesting presentation!

2021 Morgan Dollar

by Jeff Lubbert

Some of you may know but I am guessing most of you don't know, the reason I started metal detecting was to enhance my coin collection. This newfound hobby for me started around 1978 to 1980 (yah, I have been detecting a while). I have since shifted my detecting from coin shooting to relic hunting but realistically, I consider myself an opportunist detectorist. This means that if the opportunity arises for me to go detecting, I will do it no matter what type of detecting it is.

With that being said, I still have a coin collection and am still an active coin collector. When the mint announced that it was going to produce both Morgan and Peace silver dollars in 2021, I was ecstatic. However, I have been greatly disappointed in the Mint's ability to keep their website up during the release of some of their recent very popular releases. The Mint was going to release these new Morgan dollars in all of the original mint marks with the coins being minted at the designated mints. Though the Carson City and the New Orleans mints are no longer operational, those coins were to be minted in Philadelphia and the "mint mark" was what they call a privy mark. This means that it is not officially a mint mark but rather a raised portion of silver with the "mint marks" CC or O infused into that raised portion of metal. Morgan Dollars were originally minted in Philadelphia, San Francisco, New Orleans, Carson City and Denver. In 1921 the Peace Dollar was only minted in Philadelphia, so the 2021 Peace Dollar was only minted in Philly as well.

The Mint experienced severe technical issues during the first release, the CC and O privy marked coins. There were thousands of complaints reported to the mint and with the limit of 175,000 pieces for each mint mark there was no margin for error if you hoped to get your order in. I was one of those people who couldn't get my order in. To say I was disappointed would be a huge understatement, I really wanted to get a full set (actually I wanted 2 sets) of the 2021 Morgan Dollars. The original issue price of the 2021 Morgan and Peace dollars was set at $85 per coin. Considering that the coin was .858 ounce of silver it was a bit steep of a price to pay but I was more than willing to pay it. After my failed attempt to get my coins ordered I was resigned to the fact that I was not going to get the set that I desperately wanted.

Along comes the Monopoly hunt hosted by Dan Pierce. It was a fun hunt with a couple of fun twists. Dan encouraged trading of coins found for property tokens. When the hunt started, I found a multitude of coins, including silver dimes, quarters along with a bunch of clad. Property tokens were eluding me for several minutes then I managed to swing my coil over the light blue Connecticut Avenue property. From there I was on a mad dash to try to trade for another light blue property.

Finally, I found Oriental Avenue and I ended up trading a silver dime and an Indian Head Cent for it. I wish I could remember who I traded with to get it. I kept searching for targets hidden in the grass all the while asking everyone I came across if they had a light blue property. With only a few minutes left in the hunt I heard that both John Olson and John Hinton both had dark blue properties I made my way over to John O and told him hoping he would get the first Monopoly. As they were working out a trade, I came upon Everett who had the last light blue property. I quickly worked out a deal with Everett for a silver quarter for his Vermont Avenue. I made my way over to Dan to let him know that I had a Monopoly, the first one to get reported to him, for which he gave me a 3-D printed token. Knowing Dan, I was pretty sure that the prize for a first Monopoly would be good, heck I knew that he had a gold coin to give away.

After all of the prizes were given out Dan made the announcement that he was going to give out the prize for the first Monopoly and I was expecting a Dos Peso, which I would have been extremely happy with. But when Dan pulled out the 2021-D Morgan dollar I was literally pushed to tears. I have been going through a pretty rough patch in life lately and this one ray of sunshine was really needed at that point in time. Of course, now I need to finish off the complete 2021Morgan series and I might as well get the 2021 Peace Dollar as well. Thanks Dan, you are going to cost me some serious money! In all seriousness, this one prize could have been not given out but was due to Dan's generosity and it really did make a HUGE difference in my outlook in life.

THANK YOU Dan!!

Breakfast Club

by Chris Davis

Friday, Nov 5, 2021

The Breakfast Club journeyed over to the West Bar Val Wood Park to make its November 5 hunt. The ground was a bit hard, but temperatures were perfect. Not too hot, not too cold. It was just right.

West Bar Val Wood Park is a very old park, and we found enough garbage to prove it. As Marty said, "this is the park where bottle caps and aluminum shards go to die". Oh well, we couldn't complain about lack of targets.

Unfortunately, we did not make any great jewelry finds, but 2 non-precious metal rings were recovered. Mark C. got one, Bob H. got another. Bob also picked up an interesting bracelet and a heart pendant.

Michael W. dug up a neat Washington D.C. Capitol Building Medallion. Roy N. excavated an amusing lock/box.

Bob H. did best on change with $11.49. No-one else even got close to that. Jeff M. had $6.13, and a very nice loaded .25 Auto pistol round. Roy had $4.56.

November 20, 2021

The weather is finally starting to change a bit. Lows were in the 30's, with highs in the 50's. When the clouds were over, it was cool. When the sun was out, it warmed up considerably. Overall, it was a fine day to be out. And, we moved the starting time for the winter Breakfast Club outings to 10:00.

After breakfast, we drove over to Robinson Park for our hunt.

We did not expect to find a great deal of change at Robinson, but chances for jewelry were good. And so it came to pass. We made some very nice finds on the day. With the exception of Brice Y., we did not find much change. Last I heard, Brice Y. had 18 quarters. Bob H. came in second with $3.05. I think I had a massive $1.58.

Greg L. picked a nice Canadian Loonie coin. Mary S. recovered an Old Timer pocket knife. I laid my rusty pocket knife beside it for comparison. I do not waste a lot of time oiling my knife.

Bruce M. found a hash pipe, being from the Boulder area, I am sure he can use.

Dan P. dug up a silver dime, 1953. Roy got a silver Teddy Bear

pendant and a 1942S Wheatie.

Marty S. also got a Wheatie. I think the best find of the day was a silver necklace found by Raffaele.

Six of us went on over to Cranmer Park for one last try. I actually did quite well finding a small silver ring and a silver Tiffany's necklace pendant.
